Being a written chronicle of the ideas and design of a one player (non opponent) card based tabletop strategy game, currently titled Spell Saga, until some such other name comes fancy

The idea came to me just last week, or rather, I should say
 the possible conclusion to a lifelong idea occurred to me:
 Is there a way to make a card game where you can play against yourself
 without an opponent?
 Yes.
 I decided, if I added in story, characters, and enough fun and exciting design.

Narcissism in prose

12-13-2009

Last night in the stoner (the 2nd place where all good ideas come from) I thought on perhaps the way to have genuinely new story would be to have 2 decks

playing or buying a (spell step) card, which contains the would hold all the spells you could buy

Okay.

I'm tired. It's 11:00 @ night, and it's long for Holiday to be running.
I figure it might be good to get some ideas down before our little snowbird makes them into snow.

So, our future group.
and how future crypto-typos are pursued and
myriad spellings.

As of Tonight:

Our first cow game is now Schedded-Schedded! to go live this Summer, 2010.

It's important for a few reasons, but mainly, out in the interest of this Journal; the plan is to make Epic, not put it online for free, thanks to our nifty new web developer.

If it goes popular enough, we can charge for advertising, and use the money to put this game, Spell Saga it shares.

It's a simple plan based solely on one possible outcome,
but there's other ways as well.

one slow step out at a time.

There's been quite a few prayers about Spell Saga these last few days, which is great. Because.

Development for Epic starts January, less fun a month away, and it's time to put Spell Saga on hold while we finish the first game.

I got on down with my iPad (17 valleys or Lemmy to them) and did the math for the first of the 3 decks for Spell Sages.

Each hand has deck 1 will be 60 cards, double sided, that's 120 cards.

- I don't realize we have a couple of cards on one double sided, which cards are math...

12-26-2009

Have you realized that I write on the Secau page
first, on the this one?
Crazy.

I have, I think about or over half the deck fixed up or printed by computer.

This is Brilliant, as now I can replace either side of the card with a quick photoshop and print job.
Also, it helps me focus more on the mechanics of playing.

The cards are so much smaller now, as well.
Should be interesting...

12-26-2009

Christmas was Brilliant, thank you for asking.

How quite a thought this morning in the bathroom → why does it always take me so long to remember my magnetic affinity for Narration?

★ Instead of, (or as well as) "folk" cards, Narration cards which tell you the Story would be genius.

Especially in the beginning!

determines when the chapter ended?

and each card will effect
how many cards are needed

if this fact (6)
the (6) cards
must be read
in the play
to end the chapter
or
to finish

★ This would create the necessary marriage of mechanics, trying to gather as much as possible from each chapter, and varying against the claim of possible endings.

★ I actually became upset horribly Story coffee this morning, and I'm really positive it was this, not so far even the time spent during the game to well which led to these conclusions.

New Year Day
1-1-10

Just played through a game until I got bored.

of note:

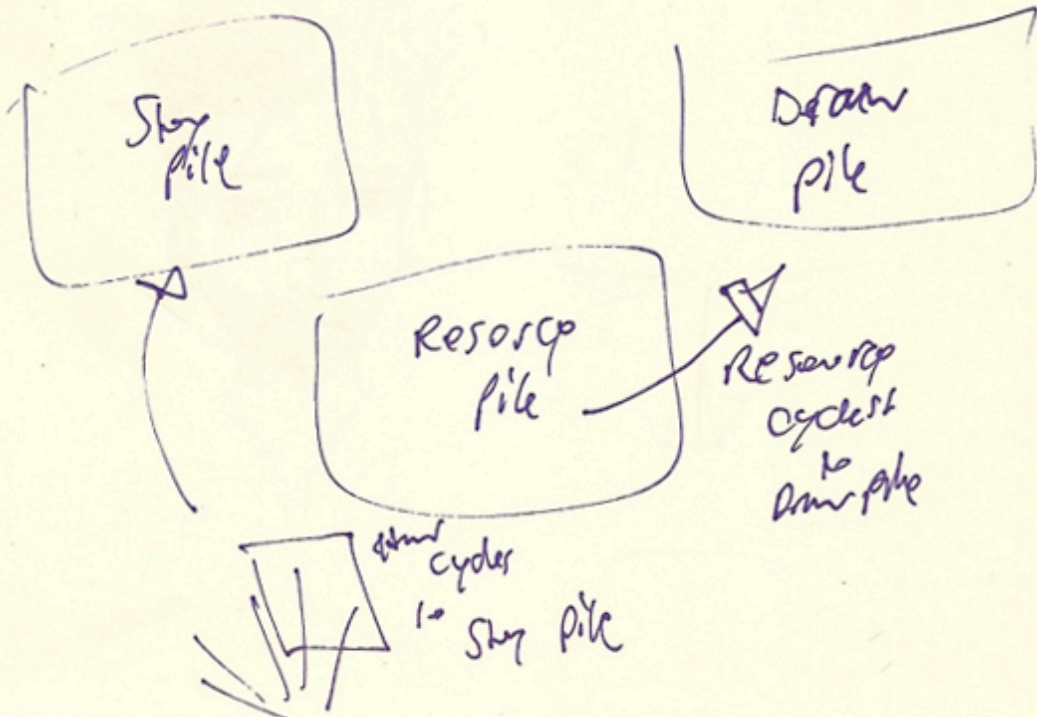

I need to make things simpler

↳ less "each card is a new mechanic"
or more "overall mechanics".

✱ It needs to work like a well oiled machine
with less tough process going into each decision

↳ also, saying to count things as "piles"
is good.

✱ I think the whole "winning by discarding
to stay pile" has merit.

New Year's Day

What if, we took multiple Story pits
we get then a 'fill up' quota...

Are all stories had to be follow before moving onto the next chapter?

I want this game to feel fun &
extremely replayable

So, here's.
